Ninety-Nine in the Shade.

A MEMORIAL ONE.
Oh for a lodge in a garden of umbrellas!
Oh for an iceberg or two at control!
Oh for a vale which at midday the dew cumbers!
Oh for a pleasure-trip up to the Pole!
Oh for a little one-story thermometer,
With nothing but zeroes all ranged in a row!
Oh for a big, double-barrelled hygrometer,
To measure this moisture that rolls from my brow!
Oh that this cold world were twenty times colder!
(That's a irony red hot it seems to me!)
Oh for a turn of its dreaded could shoulder!
Oh what a comfort an agony would be!
Oh for a grog to lullify heaven,
Scooped in the rock under cataraet vast!
Oh for a winter of discontent even!
Oh for wet blankets judiciously cast!
Oh for a soda fount spouting up boldy
From every hot lamp-post against the hot sky!
Oh for proud maiden to look on me coldly,
Freezing my soul with a glance of her eye!
Then oh for a draught from a cup of "cold pleasure!"
And oh for a resting place in the cold grave!
With a bath in the Styx, where the thick shadow lies on
And deepens the chill of its dark-running wave!

Humorous.

A Holy Land Horse.

In his travels out of Jerusalem, Mark Twain had an extraordinary horse, which he thus paints. We should wish to "tarry at Jericho," had we such an animal:

"I have a horse now by the name of Jericho. He is a mare. I have seen remarkable horses before, but none so remarkable as this. I wanted a horse that would shy, and this one fills the bill. I had an idea that shying indicated spirit. If it is correct I have got the most spirited horse on earth. He shies at everything he comes across with the utmost partiality. He appears to have a mortal dread of telegraph poles especially; and it is fortunate that these are on both sides of the road, because, as is now, I never fall off twice in succession on the same side. If I fell on the same side always it would get monotonous after a while. The creature has shied at everything I walked up to that with an intrepidity and recklessness that was astonishing. And it would fill any one with admiration to see how he preserved his self-possession in the presence of a barley stack. This dare-devil bravery will be the death of this horse some day. He is not particular fast, but I think he will get me through the Holy Land. He has only one fault. His tail has been chopped off, or else he has set down on it too hard some time or other, and has to fight the flies with his heels. This is all very well, but when he tries to kick a fly off the top of his head with his hind foot it is too much of a variety. He is going to get himself into trouble that way some day. He reaches around and bites my legs, too. I don't care particularly about that, only I don't like to see a horse too sociable."

DIDN'T WANT A CRACKER.—Not a thousand miles from where we write things ain't as they used to be—the hotel bars are all closed tightly, it is supposed—as from the following dialogue it will be seen that they sell no liquor. An old chap entered the bar and as usual called for "something to take." The answer of the landlord was:

"We don't sell liquor. We will give you a glass, and then if you want to buy a cracker, we will sell it to you for ten cents."

"Very well," said the old chap, "hand down your decanter."

"The good creature" was handed down and our hero took a stiff horn, when on turning round to depart, the unsuspecting landlord passed him the crackers with the remark, "Don't you want a cracker?"

"Well, no; I guess not; you sell 'em too dear. I can get lots on 'em five or six for a cent anywhere else."

A CEREMONIOUS JUDGE.—Judge K., of Indiana, is a great stickler for forms. One day a soldier, who had been battered considerably in the war, was brought in as a witness. The Judge told him to hold up his right hand.

"Can't do it, sir," said the man. "Why not?"

"Got a shot in that arm, sir."

"Then hold up your left."

"Then," said the Judge, sternly, "you must hold up your leg. No man can be sworn, sir, in this court by the law unless he holds up something!"

A DRUNKEN MAN, after trying in vain to keep on the sidewalk, was heard to exclaim, "There now! go into the street if you want to."

"I live by my pen," said an editor, wishing to impress a young lady. "You look as if you lived in one," was her reply.

A SEA OF TROUBLES.—A little darkey was recently found sitting on the stoop of a fashionable house crying piteously.
"What's de matter wid you?" asked a colored woman.
"De matters nuff—double trouble all ober de house. Fader am drunk—mudder am gone wid close—sies broke de looking glass wid her eyes full ob kyan pepper, and Pete Wood put de mustard on de hair for goose grease. I put salt in my tea for white sugar wat mudder has when Professor Hannibal comes to see her, and it made me seaseick. De dog licked Pete's face, and got his moult full ob mustard, and lies under de bed a howlin'. De kitten got her head in de milk pot, and I cut her head off to save de pitcher, and den I had to brake de pitcher to get de hed out, and de way I'll get licked when mudder comes home, for setting de bed a fire, will be a sin."

A Mother to her Daughter on Marriage.

You are now, my beloved child, about to leave these arms which have hitherto cherished you, and directed your every step, and at length conducted you to a safe, happy and honorable position. You must now be no longer the flighty, inconsiderate, haughty, passionate girl, but ever, with deference and delight, have the merit of your husband in view. Reflect how vast the sum of your obligation to the man who confers upon you independence, distinction, and, above all, felicity. Moderate, then, my beloved child, your private expenses, and proportion your general expenditures to the standard of his fortune, or rather his wishes. I fear not that, with your education and principles, you can ever forget the more sacred duties, so soon to be your sphere of action. Remember the solemnity of your vows, the dignity of your character, the sanctity of your condition. You are amenable to society for your example, to your husband for his honor and happiness, and to heaven itself for these rich talents entrusted to your care and improvement; and though, in the maze of pleasure or the whirl of passion, the duties of the heart may be forgotten, remember, my darling child, there is a record which will one day appear in terrible evidence against us for our least omission.

[Moore's Rural New Yorker.]

From a gentleman just from Conwayboro, we have gathered the particulars of a terrible accident by which two ladies and a servant were, on Saturday afternoon last, drowned in the lake. The ladies are Mrs. Bolton and Miss Fredrika Beaty, both daughters of T. W. Beaty Esq., of the Horry News. Mr. Beaty's house stands on the bank up the lake, and the ladies of his family have been in the habit of bathing inside their father's yard. On Saturday afternoon they went into the lake as usual, accompanied by a servant girl. The other members of the family were not on the premises at the time, but a servant, in passing through the yard, saw on the surface of the water the sudden struggle of a hand which in a moment disappeared. She ran at once to Mr. Beaty's office, some two or three hundred yards distant, and gave the alarm. Mr. Beaty and Mr. Rhodes arrived at the lake in a few moments, but all was still! They with others plunged into the water, and in the course of a few minutes all the bodies were recovered. The time they were submerged was about fifteen or twenty minutes. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon and was an occasion of melancholy interest. In this great calamity, Mr. Beaty will have the sympathy of the whole country.

[Marion Crescent.]

An exchange says, a bachelor is a miserable, disagreeable, dissatisfied, hated, despised, forgotten, unreasonable, unlawful, unchristianlike, uncharitable, unprincipled, ought-to-be ashamed, good-for-nothing, uncombed, unwashed, uncared, unclothed, uncared for, ofcast of creation, who ought to go and marry some artistic, musical, smiling, blushing, delightful, charming, social, tasteful, sweet, exquisite, religious, prayerful, conscientious and virtuous old maid; and raise up a family of sweet, good-looking, loving, laughing, curly-headed, dimpled-cheeked, bright-eyed, cute, frolicking, blissful, cheerful, joyful little children, and thus follow the worthy example of his father before him.

BEAUTIES often die old maids. They set such a value on themselves that they don't find a purchaser before the market is closed.

If a young lady has a thousand acres of valuable land, the young men are apt to conclude that there are sufficient grounds for attachment.

A VETERAN was relating his exploits to a crowd of boys, and mentioned having been in five engagements. "That's nothing," broke in a little fellow, "my sister Sarah has been engaged eleven times."

HORRIBLE DEATH.—A few days ago, a young lad passing hurriedly across West Broadway, New York at an inopportune moment, was knocked down by the horses of a city railroad car, and his body thrown in such an attitude as to bring his head at the wheel. On went the car and before it could be stopped the terrible crashing noise which startled the passengers, and the frightful shriek which almost turned blood to frigidly told a terrible tale. The lad's head was completely severed, and his brains scattered over the track and the wheels. Horror seized everybody in the car and it was a long time before they recovered. The accident was purely the fault of the lad.

EXPENSIVE PLATES.—Fashion plates. They are rather more apt to break those who wear them than to be broken.

If you would be pungent, be brief; for it is with words as with sunbeams—the more they are condensed the deeper they burn.

It is said that bodies injected with a mixture of three parts of glycerine and one of carbolic acid will be preserved several months without emitting an offensive odor.

The General Synod of North America, which closed its session at Winchester, Va., a few days ago, has decided to locate a Theological Seminary in Columbia.

A PRINCIPALLY GAMBLING HELL.—A correspondent of the Boston Journal, in a letter from Saratoga, says that John Morrissey's new house there is far the most gorgeous house on the continent. The main floor is divided into three rooms, two of which are devoted to play and one for dining. The fitting up of the rooms is simply magnificent. The floors are covered with scarlet and white velvet tapestry. The furniture, sideboards, cornices, mantles and mirror frames are French chival, inlaid with gold. The curtains are silk and damask. The monogram "J. M." flames out on all sides. Over massive mirrors are carved tigers' heads, with mouths wide open to devour, an emblem of the tiger persons will fight within. The chandeliers are gold gilt, and the brackets are burnished in the same style. On the saloon floor there are one hundred and twenty-five lights, and two hundred and seventy in all the house. Private staircases lead to the rooms aloft, and these rooms, on the stories above the parlors, are gorgeously fitted up for guests. The lower floor is for kitchen, wine cellar, laundry and for domestic uses. The club house cost $60,000. A lot near is owned by a church. The parish would not sell, but the ground is rented to Morrissey for ten years, at $1,600 a year, to give room and light for the Club-house.

There was an old negro woman called "Jane," "for short," who announced to the negroes near Springfield, Limestone County, Texas, that the millennium would take place and the "mighty ship of Zion" would come down to take up to glory those who complied with her directions, on the 26th of May. In accordance with her instructions, preached to a large congregation, the believers burnt one half of all their worldly possessions in a big bonfire, and their growing crops, (corn and cotton) gave way half their children, &c. They then danced, and danced a "holy dance." Afterward they did one sensible thing—they killed all their dogs. Jane then proposed, it is said, that they should eat the dog meat; but they hesitated, and she did not succeed very well in the attempt herself. Finally she proceeded to measure with a view to sacrificing her own child, an infant. At this point the proceedings were interrupted by those who lacked faith in her ministry, and Jane was arrested and restrained from further preaching. Their neighbors are helping the unfortunate converts to replant their ruined fields, and make up, so far as possible, their losses.

THE STATE GUARD AT ABBEVILLE.—We learn that Assistant Adjutant General, R. B. Elliott, on his recent visit to our town, disbanded the force of State Guard here employed in guarding the deposit of arms, with the exception of two persons; and limited that the arms would soon be removed. For some time past we have deplored the waste of raw material in employing nearly a dozen athletic laborers, to play the idle role of the soldier, when the farmers of the country were sending up a despairing cry for help against the host of "General Green." Soldiers in times of peace are a nuisance—idle consumers and drones in the busy hive, when the summer sun and the whitening harvest call every one to labor.—Abbeville Press.

SOUTH CAROLINA MONUMENT ASSOCIATION.—A CARD.—A rumor having been circulated through the State, to the effect that in consequence of the resignation of the President, the operations of this Association will be discontinued, the officers and Board of Directors desire to say that they have no idea of abandoning the loved cause they have undertaken. Indeed, they feel that the loss of so valuable a co-worker as Mrs. McCord should only stimulate them to renewed diligence, and they would appeal to South Carolinians everywhere to rally to their assistance in this great work. Their success hitherto has been most encouraging, and they hope, ere long, to raise a monument to the defenders of our freedom and our homes, worthy of the glorious past of South Carolina. Columbia, July 1, 1879.

The Nashville Banner tells this: "A large Tennessee river catfish, weighing one hundred pounds, was opened at a fish stall located at the corner of Cherry and Desbrea streets. In its stomach was found as much as two handfuls of metallic substances, among them a gold watch chain, eighty five cents in silver currency and various pieces of jewelry. These facts are vouched for by gentlemen of reliability, who witnessed the affair."

That catfish was the only individual carrying specie on the Tennessee river.
